About Melvin Gold

Melvin Gold's career to date has encompassed a blend of hotel industry operations, consultancy and advisory work, and the commercial world.

One of the European hotel industry's best known and respected advisers, Melvin formed his own specialist hotel advisory and consultancy company in April 2004. Since then he has assisted a range of clients – hoteliers, investors, developers and other professionals – in a wide variety of assignments in the hotel sector. These have included acquisition advisory and due diligence, development-related assistance, litigation support and industry strategy. The latter has included some widely-used, authoritative research on the UK hotel sector.

Melvin resigned his position as managing director of PKF's hotel consultancy services in late 2003 having enjoyed two periods at the firm totalling over 11 years. During this time Melvin brought the benefit of his operational experience to a wide range of consultancy assignments and was involved in some of the sector's largest transactions as well as leading the production of a market-leading range of industry research.

In his four years away from PKF in the mid-90s Melvin honed his commercial skills with major global commodity trader, Glencore. Initially employed on the development of the company's real estate portfolio, Melvin ultimately became involved in the core commodity business, especially related to oil projects and on aspects of said projects including pre-feasibility, financing, risk management and contract negotiations.

Earlier in his career Melvin had graduated with an HND in Hotel and Catering Administration in 1981 and spent periods in hotel operations with InterContinental Hotels, Thistle Hotels and Metropole Hotels.

Melvin is a Fellow of the Institute of Hospitality and a frequent commentator on hotel industry matters at conferences and in the media.

Our clients and their sector involvement

The hotel industry, and tourism generally, is one of the world's main growth industries. Within Europe, in recent decades, both the capital and operating structure of the sector has changed significantly. The largest hotels are normally now branded but there are typically different entities owning, operating, franchising the brand and offering debt finance to these properties/companies. Equally distribution, sales and marketing has also changed with the advent of online travel agencies and other new technologically-driven intermediaries. These factors have also brought different issues and pressures to the independent hotel sector.

Our clients, and potential clients, come from a range of segments:

- Hotel owners, including:
 - Financial Investors
 - Property companies
 - Private Equity funds
 - High Net Worth Individuals
 - Independent Hotel Owners
- Hotel operators, of branded and/or independent hotels
- Hotel brands or franchisors, seeking to roll out their brand in a country or region
- Hotel franchisees, who may be hotel owners or operators licensing a brand for their hotel
- Banks and financial institutions, lending money to hotel owners or investors
- Public sector organisations
- Landowners with hotel development opportunities on their 'estate'. These may include commercial property owners, sports clubs, local authorities or other organisations owning developable land.
- Solicitors, Barristers, Planning Consultants or others seeking expert witness support
